THE FALL ISSUE

Do A Clean Sweep

Stock front porches, decks, and patios with inexpensive brooms that can be quickly grabbed for all sorts of cleaning chores. Use them to brush spider webs from windows, screens, railings, porch ceilings, mailboxes, window boxes, and foundation plantings. Stop dirt in its tracks by sweeping porch and deck floors daily to remove debris deposited by wind, rain, incoming traffic, and critters.

Perk Up Your Patio furniture

Here's how to clean plastic, painted, and finished wood patio furniture: Rinse furniture with a garden hose fitted with a spray nozzle. Mix 1/2 cup bleach with a gallon of water in a bucket. Apply the bleach solution to surfaces with a sponge; reapply as needed to keep the item wet for 5 minutes (advises Clorox). Rinse and let air-dry. Protect nearby plantings from bleach runoff by watering them well before and after furniture cleaning.

Establish Drop Zones

Fall means outings to the trails, park, biking, which means you're transporting gear like bikes, backpacks, coats, scarfs, gloves and sunscreen spray into and out of the house. Set up a drop zone so these items don't spread out and create clutter throughout your home. A hook or shelf by the main entrance/exit of your home makes a terrific drop zone. As an added bonus, this area can also serve as a launch pad when you're ready to head out on your next summer outing.

"A Little Bit And Often

If getting or staying organized didn't top your priority list, the "little and often" method is for you. Focus on doing a little bit of maintenance once a day or several times a day. Carry something with you and put it away each time you go to another room. Put things away right after you take them out. And do a quick tidy each night before bed. This will allow you to enjoy the benefits of being organized, without making it a time-consuming effort.

Cut Out What The Room Doesn't Need

A guest room usually has a closet — why does it need a bulky wardrobe as well? In the redesign, ditch it to make way for a small seating area, a nice-to-have for visitors who may not need the extra storage.

Extra Small Mirrors Have Big Impact

We've all heard the adage about mirrors: They open up your space, make a room feel larger, etc. Yes, it's all true, but mirrors can be expensive, wall-dominating items that can overwhelm a space. Don't worry: A smaller mirror has the same effect without stealing all of the attention.
